History

Le Cordon Bleu's name (blue ribbon in French) and logo are a direct reference to the French order of knights of the Holy Spirit, founded in 1578, also known as Chevaliers du Saint Esprit, whose members wore a medal suspended on a blue ribbon. The feast that followed the Knighting ceremonies had a reputation for being very grand, and the food spectacular. Le Cordon Bleu school's prestige in Paris in the early 20th century contributed to the expression of being a "Cordon Bleu", meaning a talented chef. As Philéas Gilbert wrote in La Revue Culinaire in 1939, the lessons at Le Cordon Bleu symbolise culinary talent pushed towards utter perfection.

It all began in 1895, when journalist Marthe Distel founded the first weekly culinary magazine of the period, La Cuisinière Cordon Bleu. The magazine had 20,000 subscribers!

Marthe Distel rapidly came up with the idea of inviting subscribers to take part in free cuisine lessons, with chefs demonstrating recipes. The magazine reflected the great French bourgeois cuisine of that era but also demonstrated an openness to world cuisines as it was published in several languages.

The first cuisine lessons were taught at Le Cordon Bleu school in Paris from 15th October 1895, and the international reputation of Le Cordon Bleu spread so rapidly that by 1927, The Daily Mail of London referred to Cordon Bleu as a "Babel of Nationalities."
